[illegible] Makes a Statement—A Gigantic Corner in Oil—Young Nutt Still in Jail—News in General.

A Gigantic Corner in Oil.

[illegible], June 18.—[Special.] The Times' information from Oil City that besides the [illegible] Oil Company, there is a syndicate with [illegible] capital to make a corner in oil. It is a [illegible], composed originally of New York, Paris, [illegible] Chicago capital, to which has since been [illegible] combination, known as the Pipe Line. William Riddle, president of the Peoples' Bank of Pittsburg, is at the head of the [illegible] and all orders to buy or sell are issued [illegible] other members of the combination having [illegible] the matter at present. The pool is supposed to hold certificates for 10,000,000 barrels of oil [illegible] intends buying 2,000,000 barrels more, [illegible] Pipe Line company, composed of prominent Pipe Line officials and stockholders and [illegible] for a year past, have manipulated the [illegible] of Forest and Warren counties, has [illegible] 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 barrels. The Union [illegible], the largest producing firm in the [illegible], a member of the Forest Oil Company, [illegible] concern, are also supposed to be in this [illegible]. If these combinations succeed [illegible] the amount of oil, they will have all the [illegible] ground and over two-thirds of what is [illegible] outstanding certificates. It is stated [illegible] authority that they have nearly all [illegible] and the price they have fixed for un[illegible] per barrel.

[illegible] to Set Aside an Injunction.

[illegible] June 18.—A motion was made before [illegible] to-day, in a special term of the [illegible], to vacate an injunction obtained by [illegible] and Wm. J. Williams ast De[illegible] the Western Union Telegraph Company [illegible] the latter from paying dividends [illegible] of stock. An appeal has been taken [illegible] order, and it is held that the [illegible] be vacated upon the company's [illegible] bonds to cover any losses that [illegible] the payment of dividends. ### The Star Route Cases.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—In the criminal court this morning Rerdell appeared, accompanied by Merrick and Kerr. Judge Wylie asked Rerdell if he desired to withdraw his plea of guilty of conspiracy in the star route case. Rerdell answered in the affirmative. "Under the circumstances," said Judge Wylie, "the court has no hesitation in allowing that to be done. A man cannot be guilty of conspiracy when a jury has acquitted the others, and that is enough." The court directed the clerk to enter a nolle prosequi, and Rerdell left. After the organization of juries for the June term, Kerr called up the case against Wm. Pitt Kellogg, charged with receiving money in connection with the mail conspiracy while in the senate. Kerr said he understood that Kellogg was under bail. A messenger was dispatched for Kellogg, and Kerr then called up two cases against Thomas J. Brady, charging him with receiving money while second assistant postmaster general in consideration of increasing certain mail service. Kerr said that bail had not been furnished in these cases, and asked for a process to bring Brady into court. Judge Wylie replied that Kerr could have the process, and the court would make it returnable to-morrow.

Kellogg appeared in court and waived the reading of the indictment. Wilson then presented his pleas and arguments, to be heard Saturday.

Sale of Condemned Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Chandler will this week advertise the following named useless naval vessels for sale to the highest bidder above appraisal. This is in accordance with an act of congress. These vessels have been examined by the board of inspection and their report has been approved by the secretary of the navy, and by congress. The total cost of these vessels was about $20,000,000. None of them are useful for any naval purpose except a few which are used as barracks and coal hulks, and the board has pronounced them dangerous even for this purpose. This is a remarkable commentary upon the management of the navy. These are not, with a few exceptions, old. The oldest was built in 1814, but only she was constructed before the war. The rest have been built since 1861. Eighteen were built between 1863 and 1867. Timbers in some of them which have never had a deck plank laid are rotten: Alaska, Blue Light, Benicia, Burlington, Congress, Dictator, Florida, Frolic, Guard, Glance, Iowa, Kansas, Narragansett, Nyack, New Orleans, Ohio, Old Monadnock, Pawnee, Relief, Roanoke, Susquehanna, Saco, Shawmut, Savannah, Sabine, Supply, Tuscarora, Worcester and Wyoming.

Agent Wilcox Enters a Protest.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The secretary of the interior has received the following dispatch from Indian Agent Wilcox:

SAN CARLOS AGENCY, June 16.

General Crook telegraphs from Wilcox that between 400 and 500 Indian prisoners, requiring to be fed, should be here in four or five days. The presence of renegade bucks on the reservation will dissatisfy the friendly Indians, excite fear and distrust among the white settlers in Arizona and New Mexico, and, in my opinion, will result in adding to their past bloody history a new list of murders, rapes, child stealing and robbing. I earnestly protest against so dangerous an experiment.

In answer to this dispatch Secretary Teller reiterated his instruction to the agent to refuse to receive the Indians mentioned in the dispatch, and stated that he need not fear any attempt by the military authorities to place the Indians upon the reservation against his will.

General Charles Ewing at the Point of Death.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—General Charles Ewing is lying dangerously ill with pneumonia at his home in this city, and his death is hourly expected. General Ewing is a brother of Thomas Ewing of Ohio, and a relative by marriage of General Sherman.

Nickerson Coming to the Coast.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—It is believed at the war department that the report that Major Nickerson was seen at St. Louis is true. War department officials think he is making his way to the Pacific coast.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

AN AGED LADY BRUTALLY ASSAULTED.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 18.—[Special.]—Mrs. Henrietta Bush, an old lady about 60 years of age, was returning from California to her home in Mercer county, Ohio, and becoming short of money was put off the train yesterday near Greenfield, Hancock county, twenty miles east of this city. Instead of applying to anyone for assistance she started off along the railroad track, and when two or three miles from Springfield was attacked by a notorious character named Thos. Greeden who knocked her senseless and dragged her into the woods and brutally assaulted her. He then fled, but was subsequently captured four miles from the scene of his crime and taken to jail at Greenfield. Mrs. Bush is in a precarious condition. She fully identified Greeden as her assailant.

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT A SCHOOL EXHIBITION.

GREENSBURG, Ky., June 17.—During a school exhibition at Supperwell, Metcalfe county, Marshal Henry Beauchamp asked J. B. Winfrey and J. Price to desist from making a disturbance. Winfrey and Price opened fire, and Beauchamp returned it. McFarland, a bystander, was shot dead, Beauchamp was mortally wounded, a lady, Miss Phillipet, was struck on the cheek, and a negro, who has not been heard from since, is supposed to be dead in the bushes where he hid. Winfrey escaped injury, but Price was badly wounded. No arrests.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 18.—This afternoon Adolph Ehrke, a bricklayer, fired two bullets into his wife's heart and then blew out his own brains, dying instantly. It is thought the woman cannot recover. The deed was done because the woman yesterday applied for a divorce.

MURDER THROUGH JEALOUSY.

CHICAGO, June 17.—On North avenue to-night Thomas McGuire, a dock laborer, met Mrs. Mary Lytrie, proprietor of a laundry, and cut her throat with a razor, which he then turned on himself. The woman died in a few minutes, but the man probably will recover. Jealousy was the cause.

UNFIT TO TAKE CARE OF HIMSELF.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The jury declares John Gill unfit to take care of himself or his property. The Woodhull sisters, who, it is said, obtained from him a quantity of government bonds and a deed for a $13,000 house, are said to have escaped to Europe.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

INNSBRUCK, Austria, June 18.—Sabadini, who drove a bomb manufacturer across the border and who was placed on trial last Saturday on a charge of high treason, was found guilty to-day and sentenced to death.

KILLED BY A DISSOLUTE WOMAN.

BOSTON, June 17.—Bernard J. Mahon, 43 years old, was fatally stabbed in the neck Saturday night, with a shawl-pin in the hands of a dissolute woman named Liz Finnegan. Mahon had refused to drink in her company.

RIOT AT NEW HAVEN.

NEW HAVEN, June 17.—A serious riot occurred at the steamboat landing to-day. Officers threatened to arrest a drunken passenger of the Grand Republic. They were resisted by a crowd, and several officers were severely dealt with.

CONFESSES TO EMBEZZLEMENT.

BOSTON, June 18.—Arthur H. Blaney, cashier and head bookkeeper of the Massachusetts Loan and Trust Company, has confessed to embezzling $54,000 of the company's funds.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOOD.

The English Dam Gives Way, the Waters Sweeping Everything Before Them.

NEVADA, Cal., June 18.—At 6 o'clock this morning the central section of the English dam, where water is stored for summer use by the Milton Hydraulic Mining Company, broke, and the waters behind it went pouring down the channel of the middle Yuba river in an irresistible flood that swept everything in its path, catching up immense bowlders, trees and timbers. The stream tore along with a roar that could be heard for miles. Nothing like it was ever before known in the mountains. Some twelve or fourteen miles below the dam, and where the river passes within less than a mile of the town of Eureka South, the banks are extremely precipitous and higher than at most anywhere else in this neighborhood.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE FEARED.

Along the channel lived the Reese brothers and an old man named William Sherwood with his wife and two boys, and about twenty Chinamen. Persons who saw the flood sweep by here say its surface was a full hundred feet above the low water mark and one of the Reeses is reported to have been swept away by it. The fate of his brothers, the Sherwoods, and the Chinamen is not yet announced, but it hardly seems possible that they could all have escaped. Freeman's fine toll bridge, between North San Juan and Camptonville, and forty miles below where the dam stood, was washed away at about 9 o'clock, and just after the stage from this city had crossed over it, but the large stores and outbuildings withstood the current, being but partially submerged. The destruction of Freeman's bridge will, for the time being, stop the shipment of freight via this city for Camptonville, Forbes City, Downieville and that section. The freight agent went up from here as soon as the news of the catastrophe came, and he will see what can be done about putting in a temporary bridge as quickly as possible.

THE DAM'S HISTORY.

The English dam was at the headwaters of the south fork of the middle Yuba river, within half a mile of the main road between Eureka and the lake, and about forty-two miles northeast of this city. It was in three vertical sections of stone and wood, and its height at the centre section was [illegible]. It was full of water when it broke. [illegible] eighty miles of ditches, having a capacity of [illegible] Milton Company's hydraulic mines at Badger Hill, [illegible] Hill, [illegible] and French Corral, all of [illegible] Bridgeport township. This dam was built by the English company [illegible] years ago, and [illegible] or twelve years later passed into the possession of the Milton company. [illegible]

Another Lover of Clara Rennicks Commits Suicide.

THE HOP MARKET BADLY DEMORALIZED.

Giantini, the Murderer, Granted a Reprieve—Crook and the Apaches—News from the North.

CALIFORNIA.

The Hop Market Demoralized.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—[Special.] The hop market is sadly demoralized, and buyers and sellers are apart. It is estimated that stocks have declined to about 2,000 bales, which even at this figure are amply more than the demand will warrant until the receipt of the new crop. A private telegram to a prominent firm here says that two carloads of California hops sold in New York at thirty cents. Considering the original cost in this local market at $1 it appears that dealers are anxious to dispose of the hops they have on hand so as to make room for the new crop. Advices from England received by the same firm are to the effect that the prospect is very encouraging for next season, and that prices are lowering in consequence. It is believed that the crop this year in California, Oregon and Washington territory will be a considerable improvement, both in quality and quantity, over that of the past year, and brisk times are anticipated. Growers are at present offering the old crop at 25 cents, with few sales.

The Activity in Freight Shipments.

[Special.]—Judging from present indications, the activity that has characterized freights for Oregon and Washington territory during the past ten days is likely to continue for some time. Receipts of merchandise at the dock of Portland steamers this afternoon were such as to almost block up the entire space and even then a long line of trucks, which formed outside, extended upwards of three blocks. Every kind of article of manufacture was represented, from the massive wheels of mill machinery to bicycles, farming implements, and no end of groceries and staples. No delay has been experienced in shipment, as the Columbia, which sails Wednesday, will be followed the next day by the Umatilla. In addition to general freight the latter also takes up a large excavator for the Northern Pacific railroad, which will be used at the scene of operations. The Victoria, which sailed to-day, had a good freight list, and carried fifty odd Chinamen for the Canadian Pacific railroad.

Electric Lights for the O. R. & N. Co.'s Dock.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—[Special.]—Improvements are going on in the way of lighting the O. R. & N. Company's dock with electricity, which are calculated to turn night into day whenever desired. Notwithstanding the immense business transacted by the company, its dock is not as large as many others in the city, yet 240 incandescent electric lights have been swung from the cross arms and so connected with the three dynamos that one portion of the dock may be illuminated, while the other remains in comparative darkness. In a similar manner lights can be turned on in one, two or three lights, so as to meet all requirements. The largest dynamo supplies 120 lights and the others sixty each, each light being forty candle power or a total of 9600 candles.

A Protest against Ten-pins.

Rev. J. I. Waterhouse, formerly having a church in the Hawaiian islands, and recently doing missionary work here, has presented to the president and directors of the Young Men's Christian Association a protest against the bowling alley in the basement of the association's building. He says: "I protest in the name of many subscribers that this bowling alley is an outrage and a wrong to the subscribers. Lord's work on top and devil's traps below will not be successful in a religious sense, and will, in the end, prove a failure. Ten-pins is introduced because nine-pins is against the law, and such an evasion is not in keeping with Christian sentiment."

Negotiations for the Sale of the Roseburg Railroad.

[Special.]—A dispatch was received by a gentleman here this morning from Capt. Hesse, who is attending to the business of the Roseburg railroad in the east, stating that negotiations for the transfer of the road and other properties were progressing favorably. It is expected the transfer will be made during the present week, in which event the company will enter upon the development of the road as soon as possible. It is also understood that a well-defined policy has existed for some time, and that on the completion of the transfer some important work will be done in Coos county.

Refused Admission to the Insane Asylum.

This afternoon the commissioner of the Montana insane asylum attempted to gain admission to the Utah insane asylum, kept by Edgar Young, a nephew of the late Brigham, but was denied entrance. This is the same institution which was exposed by Dr. Tanner of Australia several months ago, and it is now supposed to be reeking in filth worse than ever.

The Nine Hour System.

This evening committees from the different organizations of building trades will meet. The main purpose of the meeting is to arrange for an agreement under the nine-hour system, so that all bricklayers, carpenters etc., will begin the day's labor at the same time and end it together. Oakland carpenters adopt the nine-hour system on July 1 and the San Rafael organization on the 15th.

Products of Honduras.

The collection of minerals and vegetable products of Honduras bought here by President Don Marco Aurelio Soto of Honduras will be opened to the public at the state mining bureau July 2d. The collection was brought to this country for the purpose of advertising the products of Honduras and attracting the attention of American capitalists, merchants and settlers.

Suicide.

Quong Fo Kee committed suicide Saturday morning. Despondency from reverses in fortune was the cause. He was reduced from a prosperous merchant to a merchant's clerk.

Chinamen, Opium and Treasure.

The steamship Arabic, from Hongkong, brought 173 Chinese, 117 for this port and 57 for Victoria. The Panama also brought $750,000 worth of opium and $60,700 in treasure.

Passengers by the Victoria.

Passengers by the Victoria to-day: Tacoma—R. P. Bacon and wife, T. Owen and daughter, A. H. Burns and wife. Seattle—Mrs. Susan Eva. Victoria—E. A. Blakeley, E. M. Furgusson.

Drowned.

Thomas Murphy, the four-year-old son of Engineer John J. Murphy of No. 4's Engine Company, was accidentally drowned by falling into the bay from the wharf, while playing with companions.

San Francisco Notes.

[Special.]—Judge Fields of the U. S. supreme court leaves for Portland Wednesday.

The employes of the firm of I. S. Rosenbaum & Co., well known in Portland, give a picnic on the 24th, to which all sojourning Oregonians are invited.

The False Boom in Stocks.

The recent "whoop-up" in stocks, so far as it has any visible reason, was simply a ruse to get stockholders to pay up their assessments. Many have been dropping out from the assessment paying army in the last few years, and every now and then something has to be done to prevent general demoralization.

Suit against Flood.

SACRAMENTO, June 18.—Suit has been filed by Archibald Borland to recover from James C. Flood a proportion of $[illegible] promissory note, and $15,[illegible] interest and costs thereon, for which it is claimed he is liable as a stockholder in the Wyoming and Dakota Water Company. The promissory note was given February [illegible] 1881. It is alleged that Flood is a stockholder in the company to the extent of $1,400,000.

The Prison Directors' Investigation.

SACRAMENTO, June 18.—The state prison directors' investigation was resumed this morning. Hearing is on specification first, charging that the charge of $58,123 85 in the report for the year ending June 30, 1881, to the account for prison improvements and general expense, is false. Nothing has been developed as yet.

OUR SEATTLE BUDGET.

A "Chronicle" Reporter has a Talk with Senator Edmunds and T. F. Oakes.

SEATTLE, June 18.—[Special.] The Edmunds-Oakes party arrived here at 4 o'clock this afternoon. They were conducted about the principal streets and were much pleased with the evidence of life and thrift everywhere to be seen. A representative of the Chronicle interviewed Mr. Oakes and Senator Edmunds. After being introduced the gentlemen laughingly referred the scribe from one to another of the party for an interview and finally said Senator Edmunds was the best man to interview, that he always turned the tables and asked more questions than any reporter could answer or ask. The reporter said he would be glad to have an interview with Senator Edmunds but as more important business with Oakes and would be pleased if he would answer some questions if he has no serious objection.

"When will the steel steamers, now building, be put on here?"

"In November."

"Will they run from this city to British Columbia and will Seattle be their Puget terminus?"

"They will run between all important Sound points, and endeavor to accommodate the largest number of people without exciting the jealousies of any one locality."

"Will the line be straightened out between Lake View and Puyallup on the Seattle road, and when?"

"I don't understand that question."

Here Superintendent Buckley explained the it meant, "would the railroad sidetrack Tacoma?" and while all laughed, Mr. Oakes said, "By no means, and far from it."

Then Mr. McNaught explained that Mr. Villard promised to do it in order to straighten a great bend in the track, whereupon Mr. Oakes said if Mr. Villard promised that he had no doubt. Mr. Villard would keep his promise, as he always did in regard to everything.

"Is the railroad company going to build down the city front of Seattle?"

"Not at all," replied Mr. Oakes, "we do not intend to build down anything about Seattle, but we do intend to build up the front and every other part of Seattle in every way we can."

The scribe then boarded the steamer North Pacific for an interview with Senator Edmunds, and introducing himself as a representative of the Chronicle. The scribe asked the senator to say something about his trip, and how he had enjoyed his visit to Puget Sound. The islands and surroundings was the most beautiful country he had ever seen. He had visited many homes and cities on his tour, but nowhere had he seen more enterprise and business prosperity than at Seattle. He then began to question and cross-question the scribe as to how many people there were in Seattle and was answered 8000.

"How many does Seattle expect to have in another year?" He was told 25,000 at the very least. "How would we supply them with water?" The scribe informed him that we had about a dozen water companies that were piping water from springs to all parts of the city. The senator asked if that would supply as large a population, and he was answered, that Seattle did not depend on them entirely, but already had a company at work that were laying a pipe to bring water from lake Washington.

"Where was lake Washington, and what kind of a lake was it?"

He was informed that it was the most beautiful clear water lake in the northwest, 20 miles long and from two to six miles wide, forming the eastern deep water front of Seattle, from whose charming shores the most beautiful scenery in the world could be seen, embracing hundreds of miles of the Cascade range with mounts Baker and Tacoma looming above them. The senator seemed very much interested and said he should like very much to see Lake Washington and thought Seattle a fine place to build a large city. The party visited Port Townsend, Victoria, Whatcom, Seattle and Tacoma on their tour of the Sound and all enjoyed the voyage greatly, especially among the islands of the Archipelago. The party will go from Tacoma to Portland by rail, and then return by way of the Northern Pacific to the east.

CROOK AND THE APACHES.

A Misunderstanding among the Hostiles—Serious Trouble Apprehended.

WILCOX, June 18.—It is understood that the 2nd agent at San Carlos reservation will not receive the captured hostiles now en route to that place. Serious results may be anticipated if it is a fact that the hostiles now awaiting to surrender near the Mexican line will not do so unless first assured of good treatment and a home on the reservation. Runners would have been sent to their camp in the Sierra Madres near the line as soon as those now en route were placed on the reservation, and on their assurance of humane treatment the hostiles would have all come in and surrendered. As they now know they will be permitted to enter the reservations, no doubt the runners have already deserted and returned to the line with this intelligence, as there are from 150 to 175 able-bodied warriors yet to surrender.

TROUBLE LIKELY TO ENSUE.

It will in all probability be a repetition of the 6th of April, 1882, when the hostile Apaches came into the reservation and took out by force Loco and his followers of reservation Indians. The Chiricahuas would make a very weak resistance if any of these hostiles should come after their families and kindred. Should no suitable settlement of this matter be shortly made all the bravery displayed by Crook in venturing as he did to their stronghold and the hardships experienced by the command will have been of no avail. Unless Crook is permitted to manage these Indians as his judgment directs, we may expect shortly one of the most bloody Indian wars for years, as these surrendered hostiles expected to go on the reservation, and now consider they have been deceived. Those yet out are well armed, and have an abundance of ammunition.

A FORMER DOORKEEPER OF CONGRESS.

BOSTON, June 17.—A. G. Bradstreet died at Melrose, in the Highlands, Saturday night, aged 79. During the war he was appointed doorkeeper of the house of representatives at Washington, which office he held for nearly 12 years. He was a lineal descendant of Samuel G. Bradstreet.

IS IT RIGHT?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your discussions of the temperance question there is a manifestly growing interest among your readers. Many of them would be glad to see you take the remaining step and declare prohibition of the liquor traffic necessary, while very many are following where you lead and would gladly follow the remaining step." I believe that there is no other single educational institution in the northwest to be compared with THE OREGONIAN. And this is not in flattery. The people have mainly made it so, and now turn anxiously toward it, trusting its form of education shall be of the highest type.

You give as a reason for not advocating total prohibition that "it is vain to expect a result in the absence of its necessary conditions." That is, it is vain for us to expect prohibitory legislation to be effective in the absence of public opinion. Precisely. "The most sanguine prohibitionist acknowl[illegible] would you, with your experience as a molder of public opinion, in other words as a maker [illegible] admit that it is vain to advocate a result contrary to public opinion? Hardly. In the discussion of every question you first decide as to the rights of the case and then proceed to make public opinion.

Then comes the question, is prohibition right? Answer that for yourself, and then, if public opinion does not agree with your verdict, proceed as you do on all other questions and make it. You can make effective prohibitory legislation possible in a few months by working as earnestly for it as you did for the defeat of an unworthy candidate for congress last fall, and the most [illegible] can in any position whatever, injure us as much as the liquor traffic does. SHU[illegible].

THE THOMAS CONCERTS.

The Orchestra, Chorus, Soloists, Building and Audience.

SOMETHING OF THE GREAT CONDUCTOR.

Madame Rive-King's Superb Playing and its Effect Upon the Orchestra—The Wagner Night, etc., etc.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.

With the task before me of reviewing the great musical festival, closed here but an hour since, and the tumult of sound still [illegible] through my nervous system, I fear I may be infusing into what I write that element of general description by which I desire to convey to those who were not present some idea of much that I saw and heard. Of course, I am well aware that it is of no moment or immediate interest to the readers of your journal at large whether this concert was admirably played, that so upon intellectually interpreted or conventional tempi sacrificed to such a performer's caprice, and should I touch on these points, it is to interest the few and with an apology to the many. But such persistent inquiries are made here and so many hopes expressed as to the probabilities and possibilities of your city and state supporting for its own behoof a similar festival, that I may fairly assume that the story of the methods and manners observed in the conduct of this great undertaking will be of general interest. To the few musical scientists and to the many cultivated amateurs among your readers I would say that any opinions I may write are the residue of impressions sifted free of enthusiasm or prejudice. So much for the personal equation.

The business outlook, of necessity, entered largely into the calculations of those who have pioneered and prosecuted this great scheme. It is to the lasting credit of San Francisco that artists and managers commenced their labors of the past week secured by a substantial pecuniary backing in the form of a guarantee fund, the subscription to which could be read as a vote of confidence in all concerned.

The pavilion in which the concerts have been held is a large oblong rectangular structure of wood. It is, when not specially arranged, but ill adapted to the purpose to which it has been recently put. By ingenious boarding of the sides from floor to eaves a compact and capacious hall was enclosed with a seating capacity of 4000. Viewed from either end those at the opposite appeared but a lilliputian crowd. The acoustic problem was fairly solved by suspending over the heads of chorus and orchestra an enormous sounding board. A system of admirably arranged private boxes accommodating 1600 persons surrounded the 1500 seats of the main floor, while stretching back in rising gradation lay the vast area of dress-circle and balcony seats. The general arrangement for seating of orchestra and chorus was open to comment. The angle at which the singers sat was good, but the orchestra platform had little or no angle, giving to the players, as seen from the front, a huddled appearance.

A full orchestral rehearsal by musicians of repute is an extremely enjoyable event. The rehearsal on Friday morning was of course strictly private. Still I was among the inevitable two dozen who by duplicity, impudence, or invitation, or by a diplomatic adjustment of the two former virtues, producing the third result, are invariably the privileged listeners at the strictly private rehearsal. The gentlemen of the orchestra had hardly taken their places when the famous conductor was at his desk before them. Theodore Thomas is a native of Hanover, and at this time about 48 years of age. He appeared on the concert stage as a prodigy violinist at six years old. After a long association with the leading musical celebrities he appeared as conductor of the Winter Chamber concerts in New York in 1869. In 1878 he took charge of the Cincinnati College of music, which he left, it is said, because unwilling to sacrifice art to monetary considerations. Since leaving Cincinnati Mr. Thomas has been coming more and more to the front a young man of recognized musical preeminence. He is a gentleman of some presence. His face wears an expression that cannot be called encouraging, suggesting that he has either just made a cutting remark or is going to. As he steps to the conductor's platform the quiet hum of tuning preparation ceases instantly. He says in quiet tone, "Beethoven concerto," turns around and scans the little audience scattered about the body of the hall, beckons to Madame Rive King, who hastens to the piano, and, with the guttural "also" of the German the great man gathers himself for serious business. The mannerisms of a conductor can do more to jeopardize the effect of excellent music excellently played than can anything else save conversation in the audience. Mr. Thomas has no obtrusive mannerisms. He stands erect and still, conducts all soft passages from the wrist or elbow, making the action more defined in sforzandos and uses the arm from the shoulder only for the broader or fortissimo effects. He uses the left hand but sparingly, and that mostly to subdue. Having observed these facts and noted that he does no more than is required, your attention is not again called to them. From what I saw of his demeanor I should judge him a man patient with difficulties and interruptions not directly resultant from neglect or stupidity of individuals. For instance, in trying over with Miss Thursby the Barcarolle from "L'etoile du Nord" in which there is elaborate obligato work for two flutes, some vexatious delays occurred, requiring reiterations, explanations and examinations of scores and parts. Miss Thursby began by asserting that the flute parts put out—would not fit at a certain point. Thomas tried the song, which stuck at the place named. Before the error was rectified ordinary patience would have succumbed, but Thomas remained unruffled, quietly awaiting the solution of the trouble. On another occasion an avoidable delay met with withering rebuke.

From programmes covering in all more than fifty selections or separate compositions it is manifestly impossible to notice all. Again, in choosing any from out this number for comment or criticism is an invidious disregard of so many others deserving of treatment. Of the overtures, no doubt that to Tannhauser was the most satisfactory. The overture to the "Consecration of the House," given to illustrate the later tendency of Beethoven to resort to the thematic material, was the least effective.

Of the Wagner night I wish to write with respectful reticence. The genii of music are exploring the unknown in this art and as they discover new continents we who have to stay at home must per force believe much that we cannot see and know for ourselves. I confess myself conservative and narrowed to old time music; that Wagnerism is to me at present a sealed book. I learned, however, enough on the Wagner night to convince me that the grand old man who has gone to dust lived long enough to understand and expound the proper relations of music, poetry and dramatic action. If this fact can be made patent through the medium of the concert platform, how much more surely the conviction must have come to those who witnessed the glorious realization of Wagner's creation at Bayreuth. On the Wagner night the spirit of music lit up all alike. No one could say how or why. Without passing dramatic action the music of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" can mean but little. Still that little told home and the audience went away satisfied.

The only other work which called on soloists, chorus and orchestra for its exposition was Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." In this the accompaniments were without fault, the chorus at their best and the soloists, Mesdames Allen and Hartdegen and Mr. Harvey, showing to better advantage than at any other concert.

Associated immediately with the consideration of the eminent conductor and his orchestra, is the name of Madame Rive-King, greatest artist of all. The lady has received at the pens of the critics more unremitting commendation than any solo pianist of her time. Her playing is so faultless that critics who know must commend, and those who do not, but must say something, have only to shake up their adjectives of laudation and hap-hazard employ them, sure of being within the merits of the performance. From the Saint-Saens concerto, on the first evening, to the magnificent performance of the Liszt Rhapsodie at the last concert, there was not a slip, not a phrase to cavil at. Madame King's wonderful memory and consummate knowledge of her art as well as her ability to execute the cruel difficulties of modern piano compositions, inspires conductor and orchestra with the confidence which gives such unshaken steadiness to the performance of concertos.

Following so closely the visit of Christine Nilsson the work of Miss Thursby was obviously open to unfair comparative criticism. It is fair to say that since I heard her some years ago she has not improved. She is a charming lady and will always be listened to with that generous attention due to a clever and conscientious artist. I believe I am right in saying that the programmes for these vocalists are selected from their respective repertoires by Mr. Thomas. He may have different views of the suitability of certain songs to western audiences. Be that as it may it was not until the last half hour of the closing concert that Miss Thursby was able to bring to her hearers [illegible] had been for the most part a reiterated and [illegible] encore. This was to a delightful singing of [illegible]. Encores were not allowed and the great maestro would not allow [illegible] had to catch a special train for Salt Lake [illegible] a fatal struggle took place between audience and conductor. The latter conducted the next piece on the programme through a whirlwind of hisses, but [illegible] other members of his [illegible].

Now for one little anecdote. On Friday evening's programme was placed in the first part the name of Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, a soprano of [illegible] vocal attainment. Mrs. Allen to [illegible] an aria from "Der Freischutz." In the second part Miss Thursby should have sung [illegible] Mozart. To suit the convenience of the green room, the ladies reversed the order of appearance, unknown to the audience. The results were curious beyond description. "Heavens, save the mark!" Poor Miss Thursby was adjudged second rate [illegible] Mrs. Allen [illegible] and when she [illegible] was most unkindly compared with herself.

Remmertz shared the place of honor with Miss Thursby among the vocalists. He was splendid in the Wagner music, which he evidently enjoys for itself, and therefore makes it throughout effective. Mrs. Belle Cole and Mrs. Hartdegen are the two lady vocalists so far unmentioned. Their work was [illegible] excellently well according to their individual powers, which are not of the high order that most contemporaries have represented. The same remark applies to the tenor, Mr. Harvey.

The promise given by the last choral rehearsal, prior to the concerts, was fully borne out by the performances of the chorus during the festival. It has been my privilege to listen to the finest choral bodies the world knows, and though I am not going into extravagant eulogistic comparison, I can assert that, keeping in view the difficulties and drawbacks necessarily incidental to hurried preparation, the choral work was in itself a most gratifying exponent of what could be done by well-directed effort. Whether the credit is due to Mr. Loring or divisible among his assistant chorus directors I do not know, but the result is nothing to be desired save augmentation in the ranks of tenors and basses. Mr. Thomas, who I should judge has little of the genus humbug about him, was warm and emphatic in his commendations of the morale and efficiency of his chorus.

San Francisco will not soon boast another such beauty show as is nightly witnessed at the concert pavilion. The god of dress, fancy free, ran riot with color and fantastic form. The audience was such a subject for thought and philosophic contemplation that an evening devoted to it by experts in character would have yielded rich results. My own deductions went to show that, with the average percentage of exceptions, the ladies of the audience regarded the concerts as a series of grand dress parades. That in spite of their minds wandering to envy, ridicule or approval of other objects than their own, the music which they cared little for, and certainly did not understand, left as a subtle influence upon their minds the conviction that their children, existing or possible, must receive such musical culture as shall open to them the mystery of the great tuned world, the sphere of which is enlarging and solidifying at the hands of masters no longer regarded as visionaries and vagabonds.

As to the playing of the orchestra which Mr. Thomas has identified with his name a volume could be written by the musical enthusiast to brother in music. Opinions have been flying about here like gusts. One able critic thought the Tannhauser overture, as played on the opening concert, a much finer exponent of what Mr. Thomas' band could do than was the second performance of the same composition a few evenings later. Another able critic thinks the first one a fool for his opinion. Romantic disorganization may have engendered the disparity of conclusions. I have already listened, and have been able out of the babel of comment to formulate the following: That take the performances by the orchestra during the past six days for all in all they have been as perfect as the musical knowledge of the present time could produce them. Perfect perfection is an unknown quantity. It may be said that the orchestra lives and moves and has its being from Thomas. He is the foreground, background, light, shade, piano-fortissimo, chiaro-oscuro, body and soul of it all. Whatever the orchestra lacks, and it is not much, it lacks from this absorption of the individuality of each performer by Mr. Thomas.

The instruments which come prominently to the fore in the orchestral effects are superb in quality of tone. Such wood-wind I have never heard in any of the great continental orchestras. The violins are also very fine, while the brass, though liberally allowed, is mellow and unobtrusive. When I take exception to the first violins, be it understood that they are perfect so far as they go, but I could not but feel from first to last that for the purposes of the concerts just over, they would have been more effective by the addition of two, or even four. The discipline is almost military. Everything [illegible] just so. No fosse or bustle, no tuning on the stage and evidences of rehearsal, in manner as well as music. The festival is over, and Mr. Chas. Locke should be content that his indefatigable effort to make it a great musical epoch have been crowned with substantial and richly-merited success. B. M.

ENGLAND.

MORE OF THE SUNDERLAND TRAGEDY.

SUNDERLAND, June 18.—Sir Henry Frederick Ponsonby, private secretary of the queen, telegraphed to the mayor of Sunderland that her majesty directs him to state that she is terribly shocked at the awful calamity in Victoria hall Saturday, and her heart bleeds for the sufferings of the many bereaved parents. She prays God to support them in their terrible distress. Sir Henry also says her majesty is most anxious to hear how the injured children are. Several children who left the exhibition before the accident occurred state that they saw a man, just before the rush, partially close the door on the landing where the disaster took place. It will be proved at the inquest that a man bolted the door ajar in order to facilitate the distribution of toys to the children as they were leaving the premises. A box containing toys, which had been placed in position in readiness for the distribution of prizes, was standing near.

BRIGHT CRITICISED IN COMMONS.

LONDON, June 18.—In the commons Thomas Power O'Connor, member from Galway, addressed the house. In the course of his speech he alluded to Bright's "vain old age," which remark elicited a protest from many members. Gladstone followed O'Connor. He declared that the portion objected to of Bright's speech at Birmingham was not a breach of privilege. He (Gladstone) was sorry for the remarks that had just been made by O'Connor concerning Bright's declining years, and regretted the course taken by some members in regard to the Birmingham affair. It was a matter of fact, he thought, that Bright's explanation was entirely satisfactory.

THE VICTORIA HALL DISASTER.

SUNDERLAND, June 18.—The excitement over the catastrophe in Victoria hall Saturday night continues intense. Some children who escaped say reports spread through the gallery at the close of the performance that the child first out of the hall would get a prize, and consequently an eager rush for the doors followed. Most of the victims will be buried together in a long trench.

NOMINATED BY THE PRINCE OF WALES.

ELEVEN INDIAN HORSE-THIEVES.

WINNIPEG, June 18.—Corporal Ward and six of the northwest mounted police brought in eleven Indians to-night, members of the Cree nation, from the end of the Canadian Pacific railway track, convicted of horse stealing near Fort Walsh, on the American frontier. They go to the penitentiary for two years.

TERRIFIC HURRICANE IN ONTARIO.

CHATHAM, Ont., June 18.—This afternoon a terrific hurricane with rain passed over this section. The wind struck a bridge of the Erie & Huron railroad in process of construction across the Thames river, utterly destroying it. There were five men on the bridge at the time, all of whom jumped into the river. Two were injured, but not seriously. The loss falls on the contractors, a firm in Buffalo. Several trees were uprooted and other damage done.

TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 19, 1883.

YESTERDAY'S ELECTION.

Either the vicious and lawless classes are a majority in two wards of this city, or yesterday there was not a muster of the whole force of good citizens against them. The latter supposition is nearer the truth. Indeed, it is certain that many in every ward did not take the trouble to go to the polls, though it was a contest of order and decency against free whisky, unlicensed "dives," and their attendant vices. Not five per cent. of the property of the city, and a still smaller proportion of its business, its intelligence and morality, was represented in the vote thrown for Andrus, Besser and Gerdes. Had proper interest been taken by good citizens, the whole board would have been swept. But there was no concert of action. There was no organization at the polls. In many instances it was even difficult to procure the citizens' ticket. The respectable and law abiding classes were moved more profoundly, and so manifested a deeper interest, than usual; but yet they were not moved deeply enough. There are some whom it would take dynamite to start into action.

There is, however, no majority in the city against the license law. The third ward did well, its majority for decency and good order equalling the combined majorities of the other two for free whisky, disorder and crime. That part of the vote which was cast for the citizens' candidates represents everything that makes it possible to live in the city, or saves the city from sinking into a deep abyss of its own rottenness and degradation. Fancy yourselves living in a city in which there was no other population than that which gave Andrus, Gerdes and Besser the bulk of the votes they received yesterday! Fortunately the supposition is impossible. The whisky ring bought and repeated votes with open shamelessness. Half their apparent strength was worked up through these methods. A registry law, which would have barred out illegal votes and prevented repeating, would have beaten every man on their ticket. The time will come when the legislature will enact a registry law, because it must. It would have done so last year but for an opposition from Portland that contended for the right to keep up illegal voting here, so as to overwhelm the honest vote of the remainder of the state. This the state will not suffer much longer.

But the free whisky association, though it elected three of its candidates while the citizens elected only one, nevertheless will not be able to repeal the license act. Five members remain in the common council who voted for this act, and the election of Mr. Sears makes the sixth. So the free whisky association will have in the common council only the three members which it elected yesterday. The Hon. William H. Andrus and Hon. Richard Gerdes, though elected to the common council from their unlicensed "dives," will have to pay the license or shut up shop. If the police do their duty they will arrest these "city fathers" for violation of the law, and keep on arresting them every hour as lawbreakers; and there are about one hundred more who ought to have the same assiduous attention. The law is going to be enforced. The free whisky association can't repeal it, and next year the legislature will give us a state law under which "Bill" Andrus and "Dick" Gerdes will find their occupation in the common council as protectors of unlicensed "dives," gambling dens and various other resorts for [illegible] wholly gone.

TO BE APPEALED TO THE LEGISLATURE.

It is always doubtful, in a contest on any question which draws a line between the immoral, vicious and disorderly classes of a city on one side, and the quiet, respectable and law-abiding population on the other, whether the latter can get a numerical majority. Add to the vicious and disorderly class those who are directly interested in making them vicious and disorderly and keeping them so, and the combined force is very large. On the other hand a certain portion of the respectable class is indifferent or slow to move, another portion thinks effort useless, and still another divides [illegible]. It is always uncertain whether an appeal to the people of a city on a question that involves moral issues will be successful. On the other side there is always a united compact force working for a definite purpose, while on the side of decency and morality, which are too often thought to be so good in themselves as to need no champions, there is no combination. A special cause, though a bad one, has special champions [illegible], though a good one is left to take care of itself. Reinforce the [illegible] by those who make money out of their vices, as men like Besser, Andrus, Gerdes and the free whisky association of Portland make money as panders to drunkenness and disorder, and you have a voting strength which it is always very difficult to resist, and, unless when the moral element is thoroughly aroused, impossible to overcome. Abuse of liquors lies at the root of almost every form of vice and social disorder. This abuse society must restrain; but it is exceedingly difficult for any city to do it against the strength of its voting slums, backed by the class who make money by the traffic in their degradation.

Though a city, through a supreme effort of its better citizens, might sometimes carry an election on an issue of proper regulation of the liquor traffic, yet the result would at every future election be liable to attacks, and citizens would find it irksome to be continually on guard duty. The proper way, therefore, to proceed is to remove the question beyond the reach of the voting rabble of a city and of those who minister to their vices, not ashamed to make money out of infamy. It is not a city law that we want, but a state law. This will be pressed in our legislature next year. Nebraska, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota and other states have set the example. A high license law in each, applicable to the whole state, lifts from the cities the burden of trying to maintain suitable regulation of the liquor traffic against the votes of city rabbles and free whisky associations. Such a law Oregon must have. There should be no difficulty in enacting it. Fortunately the free whisky association of Portland, though it may win elections here, cannot control elections in the rural counties, and fortunately again the members from the rural counties constitute a large majority of the legislature. A state law fixing the minimum license fee at $500 a year would end these contests in Portland and other towns; the liquor sellers would acquiesce, knowing that resistance was useless, and we should have no unlicensed "dives" plying their lawless trade. The contest of yesterday was fought by the free whisky association because the hated license law was within reach of their attack; but if it were a state law we should have an end of these efforts by the lawless whisky ring, since they would see at once that such efforts would be useless.

There is a sentiment throughout the state against the abuses of the liquor traffic, which will enact and sustain a $500 license fee, with suitable bond. In the next legislature there will be members to propose such an act and to carry it through. But for this, as for every other measure of reform in the interest of morals, decency and good order, we must look to the country, where morality and virtue are in the ascendent, and where they cannot be outvoted by immorality and vice. And, among other measures of reform and of honest government, we must have a registry law. This, too, the country must give us, or it will be overwhelmed by the rapidly growing evil of illegal voting in Portland.

Archbishop Blanchet, for nearly a third of a century the head of the Catholic church in the northwest and a great power for good, is dead.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

The annual meeting of the regents of the university of Oregon was held at Eugene in the rooms of Secretary Walton on Thursday and Friday of last week. There were present Matthew P. Deady, president; T. G. Hendricks, R. S. Strahan, Hamilton and Rockey [illegible]; the venerable Dr. [illegible], on account of illness, was unable to be present. Aside from routine business, by-laws were passed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] each professor [illegible] make [illegible] annual report to the president of the faculty by the end of the work proved [illegible] the commencement [illegible] the president [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Professor [illegible] and Mr. [illegible] continued in office [illegible] as professor of English literature and the latter as tutor, with his salary raised [illegible] $[illegible] to $1000 per annum.

The receipts of the institution during the year, including the sum of $[illegible] on hand on July 1, 1882, were $15,[illegible], and the expenditures during the same period were $[illegible] 797 53, leaving a balance on hand of $[illegible]. But on July 1st a quarter's salary will be due the faculty, amounting in the aggregate to about $2000. To meet this there will be, in addition to the amount on hand, $[illegible] of the permanent appropriation, and probably $[illegible] interest, making the sum of $2200, which will leave a deficit of about $500 when the next term begins in September. But on Friday last there was received from Mr. Henry Villard for the university ten of the first general mortgage bonds of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company of the par value of $50,000 paying 6 cent interest payable semi-annually. This generous gift includes the interest from January 1, 1883, so that there will also be $1500 due from this source by July 1.

The university needs an additional two-story building—the lower story to be used as a hall and the upper story as a library and apparatus room. The present hall is in the third story and is too high and difficult of access for the purpose for which it is used and needed. Besides the room must be cut up for society and other purposes, so as to give more class room below stairs. Altogether, the university of Oregon is an established and growing fact and factor in our intellectual and social economy. Eugene shows its civilizing and elevating power in every direction—and particularly in the rising generation.

SALEM.

The public has been told in a general way many times of late by THE OREGONIAN'S local correspondent that Salem was prosperous and that a new era of business activity had begun; but the progress of the capital city recently can only be realized by a visit to it. In six months really wonderful changes have occurred. Several large substantial business blocks have been erected and new enterprises have been lodged in them, a new flouring mill of great capacity has been built and set in motion, ground is being cleared for extensive woolen mills to be run by water which has been brought through town by canal, and building is going on industriously in every part of the city. These new movements have brought to the city some hundreds of new population of the most desirable class—all men of business or skilled workmen—and their presence is manifest in unusual activity in every department of business. Although many new houses have been built the demand for residences is far beyond the supply and many families are lodged in boarding houses and hotels waiting a chance to "get a house." Owing to its situation, Salem can never become a great center, and its people cherish no vain hopes of greatness; but they do expect, and upon excellent grounds, that their city will grow to a point far beyond its present proportions and importance. The presence of the various state institutions will make it always an important political point, give it always a brilliant official society and always form an element in its business. It is certain to become a seat of manufacture. A fine and constant water power is available, and many of the raw materials are at convenient hand. Salem is gradually becoming a small jobbing center, and this business will grow very greatly in the future, if it is properly looked after. Every little town which springs up in Marion and Polk counties adds its mite to Salem's business, and every newcomer in these counties adds to her local trade. We hope to see her prosperity continue.

RECREANT JOURNALISM.

The "long-felt want" proves at last to be the long felt want of the free whisky association of Portland. Yesterday it threw off the last flimsy disguise of decency, and openly advocated the election of the candidates of the whisky ring. When a newspaper becomes so shameless as to recommend and urge upon citizens as fit candidates for their suffrage a man who brazenly and defiantly violates the law by running a whisky hole without a license, and another who has been convicted of gambling, who is an embezzler of the city's money and is notoriously selected by a lawless whisky association to do its work against decency and public order, it is time for it to abandon its last pretense to usefulness as a servant of public morals, of order and of law. The journal that proves so recreant to duty fixes its status in the estimation of the public; it earns the contempt and detestation of all respectable people, and forfeits every claim to honorable consideration at their hands. Such journal has no future. It sinks itself to the plane of the lawless venders of free whisky, and to the company of those who revel in vice and immorality in their grossest forms. To this class by its own conduct, it must rapidly narrow its circulation. A newspaper is judged as severely as an individual is judged, by the company it keeps, by the causes it advocates. A great moralist said that a man never could be written down by others, but could easily write himself down. So it is with a newspaper; and that newspaper writes itself down with amazing rapidity and effect, which, in a struggle between decency, law, order, morals and sobriety on one hand, and the gross abuse of lawless liquor selling, including its concomitants of drunkenness, turbulence, licentiousness and all forms of immorality on the other, takes the side of the latter against the former. Such a paper, if a "long felt want," is the long felt want of an organ by vice and infamy—a want which will prove as unprofitable as it is disreputable to supply.

Picnic boats which go out from this city almost every morning, are crowded far beyond the legal limit. They carry but one or two small boats, and in case of accident their whole freight of souls would certainly be drowned. Such [illegible] have occurred elsewhere, and may [illegible] any time. On Sunday morning a steamboat passed the city [illegible] [illegible] the guards with people, and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the whole. [illegible] [illegible] the weight of the great load, literally collapsed and dropped it into the river. This warning [illegible] be heeded.

Since "Dick" Gerdes and "Bill" Andrus are both running unlicensed dives contrary to law, how are they going to take the oath required of members of the common council? Perhaps, however, they can get a "dispensation" from the President of the free whisky association.

The Free Whisky Advocate.

Yesterday the free whisky organ thus sang [illegible] candidates of the free whisky association. We [illegible] [illegible] to put it on the [illegible] of the moral and law abiding classes [illegible] [illegible]

Charles Calvert was [illegible] [illegible] Protection Lodge No. [illegible], A. O. U. W., vice H. Stolz, resigned, and Sophus Ferrar trustee, vice A. F. Wheeler, whose term has expired.

The Presbyterian church of Jacksonville has filed articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state, with C. C. Beekman, Kasper Kubli and William H. [illegible] as trustees. Capital stock, $5000.

His Excellency Governor Moody has been invited by the committee of arrangements having the matter in charge to act as reviewing officer on the occasion of the grand military parade to take place in your city July 4, 1883.

Miss Bessie M. Tracy, sister of the dean of the woman's college in this city, will be married on Monday next in this city to Mr. Glass of Crawfordsville. The wedding will be private and the young couple will at once start for their new home in Linn county.

In the telegraphic report of the firemen's contests two errors occurred, which I desire to rectify. The distance contest with hand engines was won by Salem Engine Company No. 3 of this city, which threw a horizontal stream through 150 feet of hose a distance of 180 feet and 3 inches; Capital Engine Company threw 176 feet and 11 inches; Tiger Engine Company No. 2 was 11 minutes and 10 seconds in raising steam and throwing water 100 feet from the nozzle through 100 feet of hose, instead of 7 minutes as stated. Messrs. Howard and Goodhue, representing Capital Engine Company No. 1, were 1 minute 31½ seconds in making and breaking five couplings in line hose, instead of 4 as published. As these are matters of record our Salem firemen are desirous that they should be printed correctly.

SALEM, June 18.

Rain is sadly wanted in this section of the state, the crops needing it badly.

Miss Gertie Sparrow of Jefferson is visiting in the family of Hon. R. P. Earhart in this city.

Mrs. Addie Fairbanks, nee Miss Lowney of California, is visiting her friends and relatives in this city.

Salem Engine Company, No. 3, have indorsed A. E. Strong for chief engineer and put up J. B. Haas as first assistant.

Hon. R. P. Earhart, accompanied by his daughters, Misses Addie and Eva, leave for Portland to-day. They will probably visit the seaside before their return.

Hon. A. F. Wheeler, assistant state treasurer, went to Mehama yesterday and made arrangements for locating his family there during the heated term. They will go up on Thursday next.

The man Cook, who attempted to commit suicide on Saturday last, is still alive, with faint hopes of his ultimate recovery. He has been removed to the residence of Mr. Dinsmore, where he is receiving the best possible attention.

The first real skin cure ever discovered was Dr. Benson's Skin Cure. It cures all rough and scaly skin diseases and makes the skin smooth and healthy. It is an ornament to any lady's toilet.

THE CITY ELECTION.

BOSS GESSNER BEATEN NEARLY TWO TO ONE.

How Gerdes and Healy Bought Votes by the [illegible] and [illegible] First Ward—Andrus in [illegible] by a Slender Majority.

[illegible]

FIRST WARD.

[illegible] Gerdes' saloon through a rear stop to a door.

Voting went on [illegible] the crowd collected. A great uproar was how[illegible] ever raised when an old man called Captain Donnelly came [illegible] vote. "Here's an Irishman going to vote the republican ticket," yelled a big fellow, and a crowd gathered around the old man and "bully-ragged" him for half an hour. "Here's your work[illegible] ticket," yelled Paddy Martin, to a voter; "[illegible] will give you all the beef you want." "Yes," [illegible] Barney McKay, "and Gerdes will give you all the beer you want to drink with it."

"When you vote for Phillips," shouted J. J. Byrne, chairman of the democratic state central committee, "you bastardize your children and your grandchildren. He belongs to an order pledged to keep all Catholics out of office."

"Make way for the working men," shouted Paddy Martin, as a wagon load drove up, "them is the byes."

"Yes," shouted a man, "them is the byes who work all the week and let you rob them on Saturday night."

The Gerdes ticket was shoved under the nose of every man who approached the poll, but sometimes it was difficult to find any one to supply the other ticket to voters. The decent, orderly men who voted for Phillips and Versteeg would not stop to bandy words with the whisky bloats, who assailed them on all sides, but deposited their ballots and went about their business. Some of the whisky men captured a big bundle of placards bearing an invitation to "vote the citizens' ticket," and burned them in the blacksmith forge next the poll with great rejoicing.

The question of democrats and republicans was seldom raised but some strange and original ideas in regard to temperance were advanced. "My name is Bill Sweeney," shouted a broad shouldered fellow, "I don't peddle temperance tickets. I came here with six bits in my pocket. I never knew any temperance man to make a cent. They are always coming begging around to me and I am giving subscriptions to them." Here a wagon drove up with a Gerdes banner on the rear and out of it alighted one man with his arm in a sling and two with their heads tied up with handkerchiefs. Evidently a hospital had been raided to swell the cheap whisky vote.

On the whole the day passed off very quietly for Couch. There was no fighting. The nearest approach to it was made by an Italian named R. J. Dooling, who, seeing that he was surrounded by friends, stripped off his coat and raved as if in a lodge of land leaguers. It took a dozen men to hold him, while he raved and howled like a maniac or an invincible. Finally one of his own stripe for gathered with him, and soon he, beaten at his own game, subsided into a "you—you—you." As the hour for closing drew near the rush to vote was great. A long string was formed and the strikers were very active. One would tell Ben. Norden to challenge every voter, another would tell him to let them all go as they were all right, and at last Ben. leaned wearily away from the window and let them slide, at the same time calling down many imprecations on his head if he ever filled such a post again. And then some one yelled 6 o'clock and the jig was up, and after a round of cheers for the whisky men the crowd began to disperse.

SECOND WARD.

It seemed that the law-abiding citizens of this ward had no hope of beating Andrus and showed no spirit in the contest. Early in the day, no fewer than two hundred men who have no visible means of support, yet dress nobbily, whose places of "business" have locked doors, and whose "homes" are with depraved women, cast their ballots for Andrus. After this showing, the feeling of those opposed to corruption and to Andrus' ways and methods was: "We can't overcome his numbers," and they did not try. Many democrats did not go near the polls and no small number of law-abiding republicans accepted defeat as a foregone conclusion. There was very little noise and no disorder. If the friends of good government had used half the efforts exerted by the free whisky crowd, Andrus could have been beaten nearly as bad as was Besser. Andrus polled his full strength, and his election is due to the stay-aways of both parties, who numbered in the second ward yesterday at least two hundred.

THIRD WARD.

In this ward the majority for Alfred F. Sears, Jr., is 204, or about two to one against Luzerne Besser, the nominee of the "republican" convention. Mr. Sears was the regular democratic nominee and was indorsed by the citizen's convention. His large majority is due to the votes of the respectable element, largely aided by Besser's unsavory reputation. At the polls voting progressed quietly but steadily until after 4 P. M. when strikers and hirelings for Besser began to send in their purchased votes. There were not enough to offset the heavy quiet vote that had been cast, greatly to the surprise of Besser's side. During the last two voting hours "encouragement" came from down town, and Geo. LaRocque, Dick Hunter, Joe Ladd and other ward strikers began their operations. All the afternoon a crowd of bummers had hung about the corner hungering for coin, but, owing to a miscalculation on the part of Besser's friends not over seventy-five of the crowd were "used." George LaRocque particularly distinguished himself by handing money from behind and dropping it on the sidewalk to be picked up by the man who wanted it. Dick Hunter had four men in view who wanted $20; and he knew of three more who could be had at the same rate. The strikers attempted to vote an old jail bird several times, but he would no sooner get in line than some one advised him to drop out. He soon came to the conclusion that his vote was not wanted to any great extent. Mike Lillis sent a wagon after ten probable voters, but neglected to send coin along. The expected voters did not appear for they wanted $2 50 each. A goodly number of the crowd desiring to be purchased had their long wait for nothing. Four cheap whisky men cornered a good democrat with a bogus ticket, and had him on the way to the polls when a young man stepped in and blocked their game. All sorts of bogus tickets were circulated by Besser's friends, but with little success. The election of Mr. Sears is a grand triumph for the respectable voters of this ward without regard to party. A gentleman at the polls remarked that in twenty years' voting he had never voted a democratic ticket, but he could not vote for Besser and he thought it his duty to cast a law and order vote.

ELECTION IN EAST PORTLAND.

The election in East Portland yesterday was quiet, orderly and clean. There were only two straight tickets in the field, and all the nominees were clever gentlemen and respected citizens. The result shows probably the preponderance of personal friendship rather than the success or failure of any particular interests. It is as follows:

HIS LAST DAYS PEACEFUL AND PAINLESS.

A Sketch of the Life of the Second Catholic Archbishop of the United States—[illegible]

[illegible] Reverend F. N. Blanchet, D. D., archbishop of Oregon [illegible]

Archbishop Blanchet came [illegible] He was born at St. Pierre, [illegible] was educated in the [illegible] seminary, Quebec, and was ordained July 18, 1819, by Archbishop Plessis. [illegible] territory [illegible] until finally, in 1846, the year [illegible] Pius IX. to the [illegible] territory south of the 49th parallel was ceded to the United States.

In [illegible] the Hudson Bay Company, of which John Jacob Astor, a [illegible] and the founder of the New York [illegible] Astor, [illegible] a trading post called Astoria, at the mouth of the Columbia river. After [illegible] the Hudson Bay Company, employing many Canadians, most of whom were Catholics. Many of them settled and intermarried with the Indians of the territory, and with these there was a demand for Catholic priests and Catholic worship.

Application was first made to the Rt. Rev. J. N. Provencher, bishop of Juliopolis, (Red River). The demand for Catholic priests was earnestly endorsed by Sir George Simpson, governor of the Hudson Bay Company, writing from the British capital (1838). He applied to the Most Rev. Joseph Signay, then archbishop of Quebec. At once, in the April of 1838, Archbishop Signay instructed two of his missionaries the Very Rev. F. N. Blanchet and the Rev. Modeste Demers, to take charge of the mission "situated between the Pacific ocean and the Rocky mountains"—a mighty charge for two men; but the men were apostles, and therefore as full of practical zeal as of practical faith. Father Blanchet was vicar-general, with Father Demers as assistant.

The journey of the devoted missionaries to their new mission was a long and most laborious one familiar enough in early American history, though almost incomprehensible to us in these days of rapid and easy transit. They labored on their route, baptizing and confirming in the faith many Indians, whom at various forts gathered to meet the long looked-for "black-gowns," as they were called. Their destination was Fort Vancouver, which they reached November 24, 1838.

Vancouver was at this time the principal fort of the Hudson Bay Company and this the missionaries, Blanchet and Demers, made their headquarters, while for four years they toiled unaided up and down the wide domain of their mission. The letters of these fathers describing their work and surroundings were full of interest and afforded valuable material for history. They learned the Indian tongue and taught the natives prayers and doctrines of the church in their own language; Father Demers attending more to the Indians, and Father Blanchet to the Canadians. Some important conversions were made among the officers of the company, the chief of these being Dr. John McLoughlin, the governor of the company's establishments (1842), whom, for his services to the church, Pope Gregory XVI. afterward made a knight of the order of St. Gregory the Great.

In September, 1842, two Canadian priests, the Revs. A. Langlois and J. B. Z. Bolduc, reached Oregon to assist their worn-out brethren. As an instance of their labor and its fruits, the following item, of many such sent to Quebec, will suffice: "From March, 1840, to March, 1841, were performed: Baptisms, 610; marriages, 12; burials, 11, communions, 60; one abjuration at St. Paul. Of the 610 baptisms, about 410 Indians, 100 whites, 40 adults." On October 17, 1843, was founded St. Joseph's College at St. Paul with the Rev. A. Langlois as director. There entered at once thirty boarders, all sons of farmers, save one Indian boy, the son of a chief.

With the rapid growth of the missions the holy see, at the request of the bishops of Quebec and Baltimore, erected Oregon into a vicariate-apostolic (December 1, 1843), appointing Father Blanchet its vicar-apostolic, he receiving his briefs on November 4, 1844. In August, 1844, arrived Father de Smet from Belgium with six sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, four Jesuit fathers and some lay brothers to assist in the work of the mission. The papal briefs arrived on November 4, and Father Blanchet, setting out for Canada, received his consecration in Montreal at the hands of the archbishop of Quebec. Thence he went to Europe, which he reached in January, 1846, and set before the pope the great wants of his vicariate.

At his intercession, in July, 1846, after the accession of Pius IX., the vicariate of Oregon was erected into an ecclesiastical province, with the three sees of Oregon City, Walla Walla (now Walla Walla), and Vancouver's Island. The Rt. Rev. F. N. Blanchet was appointed to Oregon City; the Rt. Rev. A. M. A. Blanchet, his brother, to Walla Walla, and the Rt. Rev. M. Demers to Vancouver's Island. The necessity of this division may be judged from the result of the missionaries' labors at the end of 1844. Most of the Indian tribes of the Sound, Caledonia and several of the Rocky mountains and of lower Oregon had been won over to the faith. Nine missions had been founded—five in lower Oregon and four at the Rocky mountains. Eleven churches and chapels had been erected—five in lower Oregon, two at Caledonia and four at the Rocky mountains. There were two educational establishments—one for boys and the other for girls. There were fifteen priests, secular and regular, besides the sisters. These figures may not look large to-day, but they were large at the time and of great significance in a rapidly populating and growing region.

Meanwhile the archbishop of Oregon City had been very active abroad in aid of his new province and its dioceses. He sought help on all sides, and returned in August, 1847, accompanied by a colony of twenty persons, comprising seven sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, three Jesuit Fathers, three lay brothers, five secular priests, two deacons and one cleric. The bishop of Walla Walla was consecrated September 27, 1846, and entered on his charge the following year, taking with him six priests, four of them fathers O. M. I., and one deacon. The bishop of Vancouver's Island was consecrated in 1847 and entered on his charge the same year. With the arrivals from France and Canada the ecclesiastical province in the fall of 1847 had 3 bishops, 14 Jesuit fathers, 4 oblate fathers of Mary Immaculate, 13 secular priests, 13 sisters and 2 educational establishments.

The first provincial council of Oregon City was held at the end of February, 1848, the three bishops assisting. Each then departed to his diocese, the archbishop beginning with 10 secular priests, 2 Jesuit fathers, 14 sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, the bishop of Walla Walla with 2 secular priests, 4 fathers O. M. I., and 12 Jesuit fathers at the Rocky mountains; while the bishop of Vancouver's Island, not having a single priest, departed for Europe, and after visiting Rome returned in 1852 with a number of missionaries.

In consequence of local disturbances the diocese of Walla Walla was suppressed, and that of Nesqually erected in its stead, with the same bishop and clergy, May 31, 1850. In 1852 Archbishop Blanchet assisted at the first plenary council of Baltimore. In the summer of the same year the sisters of Notre Dame de Namur left St. Paul for Oregon City, and in the following year went to California. In 1855 the archbishop started for South America to collect for his needy diocese. He traversed Chile, Bolivia and Peru, returning in 1857 after a successful expedition. Two years later he departed for Canada, returning the same year with twelve sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary for Portland, two sisters of St. Ann for Victoria, some others for Vancouver, and three priests.

In 1866 the archbishop attended the second plenary council of Baltimore, and, ever watchful for the cares of his diocese, returned with one priest and eight sisters. On July 18, 1869, he celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood, and four months later left for Rome to assist at the Vatican council, where he met his early brother missionaries. He returned to Portland in 1870, and on July 28 of the following year [illegible] [illegible] Bishop Demers succeeded the Right [illegible] Charles John Seghers, consecrated June [illegible], 1873. In 1878 Bishop Seghers was appointed coadjutor to Archbishop Blanchet, whose burden of arduous labor in the cause of Christ and his church, called for some assistance in his declining years.

At this time, fifty years since, the erection of the mission, the archdiocese of Oregon City [illegible] [illegible] priests, 22 [illegible], 1 college for boys, 2 [illegible] schools for girls, 1 [illegible], 3 orphanages, together with a number of societies and two Indian reservations with schools and missions. The first Catholic church in Portland was erected in 1852. In 1862 the archbishop moved from Oregon City to Portland, and [illegible] [illegible]

Baker was a married man and leaves a wife and [illegible] children, three of them grown. [illegible] against Baker's will. Thomas left a wife and one son a year old. Mrs. Thomas is now in a delicate condition and is liable to be confined at any moment. Thomas was said to be of a quarrelsome disposition, while Baker was peaceable. Thomas had been living at Hillsboro with his wife for six weeks.

The weapons are now in the safe of the county clerk. The wives of both men were in the lawyer's office at the time of the shooting. Baker had $21 65 in a buckskin purse on him at the time, and Thomas $15. Neither of the men spoke after they were shot. Baker has lived in Washington county five or six years. Thomas has lived here three or four years.

Dr. E. M. Brown, coroner, impaneled a jury. T. B. Handley was called as a witness, and testified to the quarrel between the men in his office to-day. He was not present when the firing occurred.

Erastus Savage was sworn. He is a farmer, and was one of the arbitrators in the case. He testified that Thomas, in stating his side of the case, talked very loud, whereupon Baker was angry. They disputed about a certain item in the account, and Baker rushed toward Thomas and pulled a pistol from his pocket. The parties present grabbed hold of each and tried to keep them apart. Thomas was in a corner near some shelves. Mrs. Thomas was between her father and her husband. Baker advanced toward Thomas, reached around the latter's wife and fired his pistol.

E. Savage, Jr., corroborated his father, but swore that Thomas made the first feint with his weapon. He saw a pistol in the hands of each before a shot was fired.

C. W. Williams testified that Baker's life had been threatened by Thomas.

Drs. F. A. Bailey and J. S. Short testified as to the nature of the wounds received by the dead men.

The verdict of the jury was that B. H. Thomas and Z. Baker came to their death by each shooting the other with revolvers. Baker's remains were removed to his home near Laurel in this county. Thomas' remains were still at the morgue this evening. The funeral will take place Tuesday at 1 o'clock. Sympathy appears to be with Baker's family. All of Thomas' relatives live in Texas.

BRIEF MENTION.

The Turn Verein will give their annual picnic at Gambrinus gardens next Sunday.

An interesting musical letter from our special correspondent is published on the fourth page.

Prizes awarded at the printers' picnic are ready for delivery at the Rural Spirit office, in Raleigh's block, corner First and Stark.

A brass cap was lost off the fire truck a few days ago. The finder will oblige the department by returning it to the hook and ladder house.

The Snake, the Columbia and the Willamette have been falling very slowly for the past three days and the June rise may be considered about over.

Complaint is made that the long bridge on the county road at Guild's lake is in a fearful condition. Planks are loose and many of them missing, which renders the passage very dangerous.

Persons who have neglected to cancel their mortgages upon the records in the county clerk's office should do so at once, and avoid the assessment that the new law requires to be made on the 1st of August.

Election returns were published from the stage last evening at New Market theater, a bit of enterprise on the part of Manager Stechhan that was well appreciated by anxious politicians who attended the minstrels.

A boy was found in front of Meier & Frank's store yesterday morning, sobbing pitifully. He said he was lost and that his name was James Burney Adams. He was taken into the store, where his father soon after found him.

A letter received by Mr. Williams of the New Market, from Williams' cannery at Tansey point, gives the information that on Saturday last a fine run of salmon struck into the Columbia. The boats captured eighty to ninety and some over a hundred each. The fish are very fine and large.

At Knappa yesterday, the children of J. F. Bender were teasing a bull which, becoming enraged, rushed at a horse standing near by and ripped open his stomach, killing him almost instantly. The animal was valued at $200. It is probable that the bull thought the youngsters too small game for him, but it will be safe to bet that he will be left severely alone by them in future.

SUPREME COURT.

SALEM, June 18.

Court met at 11 A. M. Present Justices Waldo and Lord. Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, appellant, vs. John Gates and others, respondents. Opinion by Lord, J.

SYLLABUS—1. A garnishment operates only on the legal rights of the defendant in the attachment or judgment—such rights as the debtor could, by action of law, enforce in his own name.

2. An attaching creditor cannot acquire, through his attachment, any higher or better rights to property or effects attached than the defendant had when the attachment was made, unless he can show some fraud or collusion by which his rights were impaired.

3. As a general rule a court of equity will not interfere to relieve a defendant who has neglected to make his defense at law. But if he did not know of his defense until after judgment, a court of equity will relieve.

Court adjourned until Monday next at 11 A. M., at which time it will probably adjourn sine die.

PRESIDENTIAL PIMPLES

One of the Results of Executive Excursions to the Florida Glades.

ARTHUR'S BLISTERED NOSE.

Stalwart Suffering from Tropical Suns and Hungry Mosquitoes Alone is the Cabinet as to the Results.

Probably the most trying experience President Arthur has had since he has filled the executive chair was an entertaining a delegation from a Boston temperance alliance on his return from Florida. The delegation consisted of half a dozen dried up men with blue spectacles and umbrellas and several ancient females who looked as though they never could endure a man who touched or tasted any intoxicating beverage. They had an appointment to meet the president, to talk with him about the cause of temperance which was dear to their hearts. He was just back from his fishing excursion and as he put some cold cream on a place on his nose where the skin had come off, preparatory to going into the blue room to meet the delegation, his servant said to him, "Mr president I had rather you would meet any other delegation on earth than this temperance crowd. They have come to size you up and see if the reports that your steam it [illegible] are true and your nose and face is a dead give away. None of the delegation probably ever went fishing and it will be hard to convince them that the blisters and sunburn is not the result of looking upon the wine. Now the first thing you do when you meet them is to apologize for your appearance and talk about fishing in the hot sun and all that."

The president felt a little nervous but after throwing his cigar stub away he went into the room where the delegation was looking like a boiled lobster. The delegation was drawn up in line and every eye was on his nose. The leader made a few remarks upon the object of their visit and while he was speaking the women looked at each other as much as to say "I told you so. What a disgusting exhibition etc. and the president blushed until you could touch a match to his face anywhere. When the leader had concluded the president said

"Ladies and gentlemen Glad as I am to see so distinguished a party, I must apologize for my appearance. The fact of it is a few of us have been indulging in a little—

"Don't apologize, Mr President," said a vinegar-faced female. "We can readily take in the situation by your face. It is a duty we owe to ourselves and the country to reason with you. Strong drink is the bane of our land. O, why, why will men put a serpent in their mouths to steal away—

"But, excuse me, madame," said the president, interrupting the female "you are mistaken. The direct cause of this sanguinary appearance of my face and nose is owing to a little recreation," and he rubbed his nose with his finger to find if any more skin was loose [illegible] up here for many months decided to imbibe a little of th—"

"I beg pardon," said one of the blue-nosed [illegible] any confession as to what you and Chandler imbibed. We feel that a few words from us can do no harm, and while it may seem out of place for private citizens to advise a chief magistrate, our position as independent people makes us bold to ask you to banish the wine cup from your table and set an example that can be safely followed by the youth of the land."

During the talk of the blue nosed man the president [illegible] tobacco that had [illegible] his cigar and begun to hiccough. You know how a little tobacco will sometimes cause a man to act as though he was full. The president would almost have given his right hand if the tobacco had been in Halifax instead of down his neck, for he could see at the first "hic" that every eye in the delegation was on him, and all believed he was drunk. His face flushe and he was more embarrassed than he had ever been before in his life. He looked around for some one to help him out, but he was alone, except the temperance delegation. Putting his hand over his mouth to hide the hiccough that the wicked tobacco had caused, he said

"Indulging a desire to go fishing, Mr. Chandler and myself visited Florida, and for several days we were exposed to the elements, and besides that, and you (hic) misconstrue my appearance to be the result of (hic) drink. This hiccough is the result of swallowing a bit of tobacco, and is unfortunate in coming at this time. I will weigh well what you have said, and now I bid you (hic) good day," and the president bowed and retired, while the delegation looked about the room, said to each other that they had witnessed a sight that would cause the stoutest heart to quail, and they went out of the white house, sick at heart. "James," said the president to his servant, when he got to his room, "go to Dr. Bliss and tell him I wish I were dead, and I want him to come and attend me, and bring something that will cure sunburn and blisters on the nose at once or I am a ruined man," and as James went out after the doctor the president saturated a handkerchief in some cooling liquid and laid it over his face, and lay upon a lounge and dreamed of the Florida fish and how like blazes they bit, and how the mosquitoes got in their work, and as he dozed off into the land of dreams he could see the air full of female temperance reformers with blue spectacles and umbrellas, and he thought how a good man is sometimes misunderstood. —Peck's Sun.

A Submerged Forest.

Quanan, Nev., Appeal, June 1.

For some years there has been a bank in Lake Tahoe, which in clear weather has generally been taken for moss formation. It lies at the right of the steamer's course between Tahoe City and Tallac house, about two miles beyond Idlewild. It looked as if a lot of trees had sunk to the bottom of the lake and that moss and slime had collected there until the whole presented a wavy, semi-transparent appearance about fifty feet below the surface. During the past few weeks the moss and debris has disappeared, and now when the water is clear a forest of pine trees can be plainly seen with every limb and twig perfect. On Wednesday last some fishermen went out there in a boat, and lowering some grappling irons secured several splendid pieces of the petrifaction. One is a pine branch about three feet long, which, when held a few feet from the eye, has the exact appearance of a pine branch just taken from a living tree and apparently fresh and green, the bristliness and weight distinguishing it from the freshly cut branch. The specimens brought to McKinney's were speedily disposed of to tourists. The largest piece was purchased by Henry Townsend of San Francisco for $25. This is said to be the first thing of the kind ever found in the lake. The forest occupies about two acres and seems like a forest just immersed except that its stony branches are forever still and the weeds and vines which cluster about the trunks of the giant trees are as motionless as the rocks. No wind ever stirs this strange verdure and the birds which once sang in the branches centuries ago have given way to fish which swarm through the forest in thousands.

Dickinson and Jefferson

John Dickinson Mr Moore said was unquestionably the author of that great document the Declaration of Taking up Arms in 1775. The claim that Thomas Jefferson was the author of the most important part of it was made public only after both Jefferson and Dickinson were in their graves. It had been generally accepted and he had gone into the historians even of men like Bancroft, who the speaker said seemed to have suffered syncope in the presence of the chief American democracy. I propose, Mr Moore continued, to settle the question now and here of the absolute sole and undivided right of John Dickinson to that imperishable product of his pen the original of which I hold in my hand. I am indebted to the late Dr John D Logan of [illegible] a descendant of Mr Dickinson for this document which I contribute to this society. It must forever settle this question. The document every line of it, with its erasures, interlineations, corrections and additions, is in the handwriting of John Dickinson and proves him to have been the author of that document. Address to the New York Historical Society.

How a Cat Kissed a Rat.

Norwich Bulletin.

A rather strange incident occurred [illegible] Bacharts back yard on Pearl street a few days ago. The yard at times appears to be the meeting place for rodents and in the last in quests in a steel trap [illegible] was set for their reception. Several persons were watching the trap when a large rat made an appearance and walked toward the trap. He was within a few feet of it when Mr. [illegible] a favorite cat [illegible] The rat [illegible] This seemed to [illegible] after [illegible] as [illegible] they were [illegible] and actually each other. ## AN OPENING FOR CATS

A Growing Demand for Felines in the Hand in Provinces.

Mr All [illegible] in the N Y Times

[illegible] owning cats are earnestly [illegible] cats in boxes and [illegible] city [illegible] The Winnipeg [illegible] ats and in the late advices were [illegible] for full [illegible]

[illegible] district [illegible] every [illegible] plain [illegible] Our [illegible] back fence are peculiarly [illegible] of our wants [illegible] experienced. Winnipeg should [illegible] shipment of cats will [illegible] cost of transportation [illegible] anything [illegible] be obtained.

No reason is assigned for the sudden and enormous demand for cats in Winnipeg. It will, of course, be suggested that Winnipeg is suffering from a plague of rats and mice, but to one who is acquainted with the real character of cats would be unwilling to think [illegible] and such an [illegible] undoubtedly cats have been known to catch both rats and mice. If no food is given to a cat for seven or eight days she will sometimes prefer to catch a rat or a mouse rather than to perish of starvation, but even a cat entirely [illegible] rations will not catch more than [illegible] animals daily at least for the purpose of eating it. Cats with families occasionally do catch rats and mice for strictly educational purposes—using them while giving object lessons to kittens in rat catching, but a judicious and careful cat is able to make a single rat or mouse last during half a dozen daily lessons, and [illegible] the number of rats and mice caught for educational purposes is extremely small. If there are say a million of rats and mice in Winnipeg it will take at least half a million of cats to exterminate them in the course of a week. If then the Winnipeggers are buying cats with any view to suppressing rats and mice they are making a great mistake.

The demand for cats is probably due to a sudden and uncontrollable outbreak of the domestic affections among the male Winnipeggers. As is well known there are hardly any women in Winnipeg and hence the inhabitants are without the soothing influences of domestic life. Wives are costly and few Winnipeggers can afford to import them. If however every house can have its sleek and contented cat the animal will impart a homelike air to the place which will be of priceless value to the householder. If the Winnipeggers are buying cats in order to cultivate the domestic affections they certainly deserve encouragement, and true philanthropists will prefer to send purely gratuitous cats to Winnipeg rather than to deprive any man of the means of gratifying one of the holiest impulses of our nature.

Barrenness of Rich Men's Resources.

Washington Correspondent Philadelphia Press

While on the subject of money, let me advise the reader to stop for a moment and think the thing over. Take Senator Fair—probably the richest man in the senate. What of it? He is out of place and he knows it, and he is never in his place in the senate. It was a novelty for a year, but it is stale now, and he is tired of it. Suddenly acquired riches are no good in the long run, but who will refuse them? Certainly not the poor newspaper correspondent, who moralizes on hard crackers. I cannot remember a single case wherein they brought enjoyment, happiness and permanent good. Jay Gould is rich after years of labor and calculation. He, by his own study, is a scholar. He has resources within himself for enjoyment. He can appreciate rest, and he is now going to do the things he has not had the time to do for the last fifteen or twenty years. Do you think that Vanderbilt enjoys life? Not a bit of it. He can drive faster horses than we can, and he can drink better wine; and he drinks a good deal of the better wine, if the stories are true. What is the effect—the result? He is breaking down, and will go off like a shot one of these days, and he can't take his beautiful horse and pictures and horses with him. He will begin life even with us in the next world, and not be left a hundred million of dollars by his brainy father, who accumulated the money by years of hard work and thought. No Mr Editor, it is better that we should be obliged to work. If I had money and idleness, I might be either in the penitentiary or the mad house within a year. Then where would your readers be?

The Reason Why.

The Pittsburg Labor Tribune gives the following as one reason why native born American boys so seldom learn a trade, and unfortunately there is too much truth in it. "The boy that cuts loose from the grammar school of his ward, or the high school, and having a mechanical bent enters a machine shop or mill, snuffs himself out of the memory of the girls of his school class, and one-half his boy companions, being brought up with a high regard for the necessity not to smut their lily-white hands with honest labor, pass by on the other side. Every dudgling carl is white and must strike out for a profession or clerkship. The 'working classes' are well enough in their way—far away, however—but are a species by themselves. 'Very worthy people, no doubt, but—ahem! should not be too forward, and should know their place.' 'What! a young mechanic come to see my Evalina Jane, with his calloused paw, to squeeze her soft and useless hand, and unable to polish his conversation with small talk? Perish the thought! And the mother's darling boy, her Albert Eustace, whose digits she fondles and lovingly says 'These hands were never made for ugly rough work.' No they were not, they are more likely to have been gotten up with direct reference to the facile picking of pockets!' This disposition to forsake the farm, pass by the workshop and hang around looking after a precarious clerkship, is one of the great evils of the times."

A gentleman, newly married, and a prominent society man took his bride to the opera. A few evenings afterward speaking to some friends the lady said something about the opera and was asked what the opera was. "I can't recall the opera just now," said the lady, "but perhaps my husband can." "Oh yes," said he, jumping at the chance to air his knowledge, "it was the opera of Libretto."

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

The Lard Panic at Chicago.

CHICAGO June 18 — The story in regard to the great break in lard appears to have been very completely told. This morning on change was looked forward to with considerable trepidation and an apparent fear that the market might take another downward turn. But it proved otherwise, and at the close (11 o'clock) July option which closed at $9 77½ Saturday had risen to $9 95, and the feeling was comparatively the same. Beyond the firms reported in these dispatches Saturday none others have succumbed and Ellis & Lightner among those reported as crippled have suffered their deals and in this way have tided over. The associated press, estimate as to the losses putting them $1 500 000 is as nearly accurate as can be made. Some put the losses this morning at $3 000 000 but this is largely based on conjecture. The firm of McGeoch Everingham & Co declined to furnish any additional data of its losses saying that at this time it can make no statement.

Too Much of a Ritualist

CHICAGO June 18 — Rev Arthur Ritchie rector of the Episcopal church of the Ascension, of this city has announced to his congregation that he will tender his resignation next Wednesday. Mr Ritchie has been recognized as an extreme ritualist and his church services have been marked by extreme high church ceremonials which apparently caused a difference between him and Bishop McLaren. Mr Ritchie's congregation are entirely attached to him and his parishioners credit him with having established a large and prosperous parish and with having successfully carried out a large number of charitable projects.

ALBANY NOTES

FROM THE OREGONIAN'S REGULAR CORRESPONDENT

[illegible]

[illegible] Mrs Backenst [illegible]

[illegible] Sunday [illegible]

[illegible] Smith of [illegible]

[illegible] Cahill [illegible]

Dr [illegible] Hill [illegible] last week [illegible]

[illegible] Walla Walla is in the city [illegible] visiting friends [illegible] Albany [illegible] resident.

One of the [illegible] features of the [illegible] Albany and Corvallis [illegible]

A large number of persons from this city attended a dancing at [illegible] bridge yesterday. [illegible] next Sabbath.

Last fall A Wheeler of this city brought from California twenty two head of Spanish Merino bucks. A few months since he sheared one of them and the wool as shown in the growth weighed twenty two and a half pounds.

At the last meeting of Willamette Lodge A O U W the following officers were elected: [illegible] Allen M W A P Barker foreman F M Westfall O; A C Layton recorder J Martin receiver A B Woddon financier.

H [illegible] & Joseph have made extensive preparations for the summer trade [illegible] water. They recently received another consignment of [illegible] giving them a total of [illegible] They also have packed about 1100 tons of ice.

One John Harris was arrested for setting fire to a dwelling which was partly burned last Monday morning and in an examination it was found the sum of $450 [illegible] It was almost proven that he was a tramp but at his examination a check was found for $700 on a Walla Walla bank.

The college closed last Tuesday for the summer vacation. Next fall work will be resumed with renewed energy. By that time it is hoped a portion of the endowment fund can be used and other teachers be employed making the school second to none in the state. Prof J D Robb has been proffered a chair but has not yet accepted.

A grand reception was given Miss Frances E Willard last Tuesday evening at the court house. The walls were beautifully decorated with flowers and bouquets and wreaths were suspended in different parts of the room. The house was crowded to overflowing, and the most excellent address by the lady gave satisfaction to every one.

Five members of the family of Mr Hodges living across the river in Benton county came near dying last Friday night from the effects of poison. It is supposed that they were poisoned from eating rat poison which had been placed in the room where the meat which was eaten for supper had been kept and to which the poison had perhaps been conveyed by the rodents.

Elder S C Adams of Salem filled the Christian pulpit in this city yesterday both morning and evening, and preached two very able sermons. It is not generally known, and yet is conceded by many who may be considered authority in regard to the matter that this gentleman has no superior if an equal in the United States as an ancient historian. His chronological map, which has been sold in every quarter of the globe has never been equaled for historical facts.

The success of the Albany firemen at the state tournament, taking first money in the only contests which they entered was immediately telegraphed and when they arrived home about midnight found a sumptuous supper awaiting them at the Revere house donated by many friends in the city. Friday noon the track was taken to the train and Foreman Irvine given a ride to the engine house. The boys are enthusiastic and next year will enter the tournament in full force.

It is now believed that the largest crowd ever in Albany will be here the coming Fourth of July. This will be the only celebration held in the county or near by. The committee on general arrangements are exerting every effort to make the occasion a success. Prizes will be offered for perhaps twelve different contests, and a cash prize of near $100 will be given the H & L Co which can make the best time running 200 yards and getting a man on top of a thirty foot ladder.
